LARGEST FIRE LOSS WAS NOT MENTIONED

Mr. and Mrs. Joe D. Sullivan, who occupied the H. H. Egan residence opposite the Bonanza office, were virtually the heaviest losers in the fire that destroyed the Airdome Sunday morning.

Water that was thrown on the blaze ruined all of their furniture, bedding and beautiful rugs, ranging in loss estimates at $22,000. The Maxwell car that stood in the yard was also their property and will bring them loss to considerably more. There was no insurance on any of the belongings.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE FIRE

The ever congenial and accommodating Frank Hill of the United Cattle & Packing company was the first to arrive at the scene of the fire Sunday morning when the Airdome was burning into flames. Frank, which is unusual, was holding his head off, which he never does when he is waiting on customers at the United Cattle & Packing company's market. But he was holding his head off on this occasion by yelling "Fire!" Shortly after the arrival of the fire department Frank got a horse from some place and when the heat became so great he turned it again himself and ultimately soaked his clothes and hair with the hose on the Bonanza office which was smoking badly and ready to burst into flames.

He then decided it was best to leave the horse near the office of the fire department which he did in the rear of the office. Well, to make a long story short, the scene of the fire took Frank into the night and when the kind people of the community, wife, Mrs. Hill, and Frank's daughter, Mrs. Hill, were taken to the hospital. The fire department had been made for holding the dance at the Airdome before its destruction by fire, and the arrangements had gone so far that it was impossible to postpone the party. The holding of a party in the Elks' club by an outside organization is without precedent in Tonopah, and the Shriners are particularly grateful to them for the courtesy extended them at this time. All Shriners and Masons and their ladies are invited.

Notice.
The management of the Airdome wishes to announce to their patrons that they have leased the Eagles hall and will continue to hold regular dances at that place. Arrangements have also been made for holding there the dances of other organizations who had rented the Airdome.

AMUSEMENTS

THOMAS MEIGHAN AT THE BUTLER TODAY

Billy Kane, known to his crook associates as "The Hermit" because he always works alone, has just returned via the fire escape from a professional call at the Welter home, bringing with him Mrs. Welter's diamond bar pin and a photograph of her daughter. Billy is much taken with the photo and wishes he could know the original. Fate is with him, for under the door has been pushed a telegram from a firm of attorneys announcing the death of his uncle, Ten-Carat Murphy, a race-track bookmaker, and that by the will, Billy is heir to half a million.

At first Billy is elated, but the novelty soon passes, and after donating $1000 to the police relief fund as a sort of pledge of good faith in the future, he decides to take a trip to Europe to kill time. On the steamer he meets the Welters, who are also crossing, and by reason of his wealth, not his manners, and because Dorothea Welter is always looking for something exciting, he comes quite friendly with them.

In Paris they stay at the same hotel, and Billy takes Dorothea out one evening to see the "other side" of Paris. At the "Mill of the Half-Gods" dance-hall, Dorothea drops one of her gloves and a young Frenchman, Marcel, picks it up for her. He asks her to dance, and she consents. See them all in "White and Unmarried" at the Butler today.

Also on the same program will be "The Ten Dollar Raise," and a two-reel Sunshine comedy, "Ain't Love Grand."

An Open Letter

From the Vice President and General Manager of the Nevada-California Power Company

(This is No. 4 of a series of communications from officials of The Nevada-California Power Company to the people of the territory it serves, frankly discussing mutual problems and mutual interests.)

AS TO POWER COMPANY PROFITS

Competent opinion, irrespective of preference as to the manner in which the power is to be employed, agrees that within the next ten years about $900,000 must be expended on hydro-electric development in California, if agricultural and industrial progress are to continue unimpeded.

On the vital necessity of this development there is no question, but this is not the case regarding the means by which the development is to be brought about. On one side of the issue are those who believe that these developments should be made by the public service companies under state and federal regulation, while on the other are ranged those who advocate state and municipal development, operation and ownership.

The question to be decided is not one of morals or of expediency. It should be decided on grounds of common sense and common experience, since the ends sought are basically common and to be measured in terms of dollars and cents.

The arguments on which proponents of political public ownership base their demands are shown by analysis to be very weak. Of these the one most frequently advanced represents the regulated public service companies as making large profits on the margin between the cost of electric current delivered, and the rates paid for it by the consumer. It is claimed that the elimination of this alleged profit would follow the taking over of the industry by political units, and that cost of service to consumers would be reduced accordingly.

The alleged large profits of the public service companies engaged in the hydro-electric industry are easily shown to be nonexistent. Their accounts are kept on a uniform system authorized by the state railroad commission, and periodically examined by the expert auditors of the commission. This system of accounting precludes the possibility of concealment of profits or losses. At rate hearings, publicly held and fully reported, every item of these accounts is checked and examined by specialists representing every party concerned. If these alleged large profits had any existence they could not escape discovery. As a matter of fact, this myth of great profits rests upon the erroneous belief that rates are authorized for the return of dividends on over-capitalization, or "watered stock." It cannot too often be repeated that capitalization is excluded as a factor in the establishment of rates by the state railroad commission. If a company has been over-capitalized, that is the stockholders' bad luck, but the consumer is not, and cannot be, compelled to come to their relief through rates based on that over-capitalization.

Very truly yours,

A. B. Woot
Vice-President and General Manager.

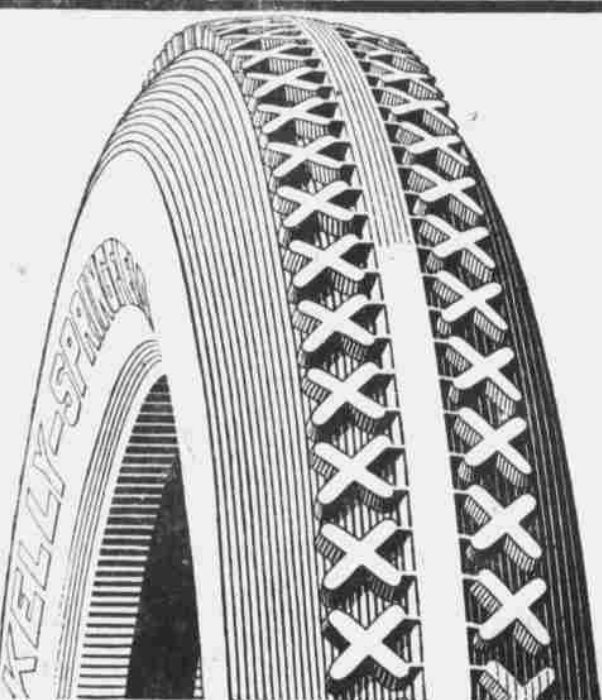

(No. 5 of this series will deal with the Cost of Money as affecting Hydro-Electric Service and Rates.)
